NOTES AND QUERIES.

"When the old adobe was the principal part of the Ormsby House," said an old timer as he halted this Querist and held his hand with a trifle too much warmth and persistence, "and when Prince Lewis and Curly Bill and Big Jake and all that set were the drivers of the Pioneer stage line; and when Joe Magee and Al. Waterman and the Lloyd Brothers were so conspicuous here and hereabout; and when Baldy Green used to meet a road agent every trip or two and have to 'hand out that box'; and when"—here he was suddenly called away to moisten his ancient clay, and we escaped a millionth repetition of the old story. It is getting a trifle moldy, is the old stock of anecdotes, and one tires of its too frequent reiteration. But bye and bye it will be precious history, and then our grand children will be gratified to have it served up to them with all the adjectives and the single handed personal pronouns and the wonderful. Even now it is not at all unacceptable in the mild and mellowing atmosphere of an indoors winter night with the steamy punch-bowl within easy reach. . . . We are glad to see that our town is going to have something besides a mere surface drainage for carrying off its accumulated impurities. These gradual improvements, each more substantial than the other, are giving our little city a certain substantial as well as tidy and well regulated air greatly to be enjoyed and admired. It does no harm, my good friend with the hayseed head, to be the least bit civilized; for it is in the cities that improvements are born of that prolific mother of invention known as Necessity, and we may, within our own means, well afford to adopt them from time to time. It is a pity but our Gas Company could let us poor folk afford to throw away our always dangerous, unhandy and ill smelling coal oil lamps. If they only knew it, it is the necessity for practicing a more rigid economy which keeps many a family from becoming a customer of that very needful and well conducted institution. . . . One should never boast of his superior natural gifts; but when their development and self assertion are as much of a surprise to their possessor as to the admiring world, why may not he with propriety take note of them and express, in modest phrase, his wonderment? Now here, for example, is our gift of a weather-seer—a mortal, human barometer, as it were. It is just as natural as the common gift of smell or taste or hearing. Months in advance—to say nothing of weeks or days, we have an instinctive foreknowledge of the coming meteorology—not the mere weather, but its scientific and technological and pseudo-anthomorphic, and, if we may use the expression, diuretic, anti-spasmodic and hyper biologic phenomena. Look with what precision, at the very commencement of this month we predicted the coming on this very day, of the Equinoctial storm! We cannot help it. It is like knowing chalk from cheese. Meantime we make no extra charge for the exercise of this prognostical faculty. It goes, like dodgers and funeral notices, with the paper. But it is a very rare gift and one we must confess we are very proud of. When this writer was in the Bahamas in 1848—but this is too long a story,—we will postpone its narration until a more fitting period. . . . As to a small showing of a warlike temper on Carson street yesterday, this vehicle of moral suasion and organ of peace mentions it merely to say that the least said is the soonest mended—which axiom is used here for the purpose of expressing the conclusion that when a serious difficulty has reached no further than an armed cessation of hostilities, the press can best conserve the interests of peacefulness by maintaining silence. A newspaper's talk can breed quite as much trouble as an idle tongue. The most important province of a newspaper editor is to keep out of, rather than cause to be put in, print a very large class of facts and rumors. It is the opinion of this Querist that too many things are sacrificed to the insatiable greed of the news monger. This world is gossiped in too freely. . . . It is noted that Senator Boggy of Missouri is dead. (His name is pronounced Bo-jee—or very like it—with the accent on the last syllable.) The deceased was of the old French descent, very courteous, very affable and with the dignity of a Senator sitting well upon him. Cleverly up in the sixties, we should say, and very much respected in Washington. A more thoroughly respectable man than he it will be difficult for the Missourians to select. . . . We note that Miss Rose Eytinge, the beautiful actress who was here several months ago, is about beginning a dramatic season at Virginia City. We trust she may be induced to make Carson a brief visit. . . . There was a false alarm of fight last night. Some reports as of the firing of guns and pistols followed by what seemed the blowing of a policeman's whistle so wrought upon your Notary's imagination that he was quite worked up to the excitement of a showing of blood and 'ouns. Visions of carnage rushed red on his sight. A prompt and conscientious investigation of the matter discovered the fact to be a certain small, innocuous fusillade of Chinese bombs; and so the alarm fades out into the calm twilight of a peaceful feu de joie. . . . THE MOONLIGHT PARTY is to be taken in, of course. One small American dollar paid into the hands of a fiduciary agent at the gate of Mr. Treadway's garden entitles the male payer to haul in with him his entire female acquaintance, including his mother-in-law. A supper of delicacies and substantial, prepared by a French cook with a white cap on his head and a waxed mustache on his upper lip can be indulged in for 50 cents. Dancing under the ministrations of Professor Varney.

"NEATH SHASTA'S HOARY MOUNT."

Mr. R. L. Tilden, the well known foreman of the State printing-office, is rusticating and enjoying the beautiful productions of nature at Sisson's, Shasta Valley, California. For the geographical enlightenment of our readers we will state that Sisson's is commonly known as Strawberry Valley, on the Yreka stage road, 50 miles from Redding, and near the base of Shasta Butte. Of all the bountiful spots in California this is one of the most gorgeous; the surrounding hills and streams abound in game and fish of every variety. It is a paradise without the snake, and endowed most lavishly by the munificence of beautiful nature. A short residence in that terrestrial elysium will remedy the worst chronic case of dyspepsia, induce one to forget the stringency of the money market; aye, even is productive of obliviousness to the most outrageous afflictions of mother-in-lawism. We extract the following from Mr. Tilden's letter, addressed to a friend in this city: "Thus far I have enjoyed myself hugely, hunting and fishing, and for the past week have subsisted solely on trout (little speckled ones), venison, game, and quail, all of which was copiously washed down by thick cream and fresh buttermilk. The tourists and sight seers have all 'lit out' for the season. The last party of nature's worshippers (Sir Joseph Hooker, of Kew, England, and Professor Asa Gray, of Harvard University) left here on the day of my arrival. Sir Joe expressed his regrets that he was not apprised of my contemplation of a visit, as he would have made arrangements to stay a week or so longer. (I am not a member of the Sazerac Club)." Mr. Tilden's trip is doing him much good and will add materially toward his rejuvenation.

A SERIOUS STAGE ACCIDENT.

On Wednesday evening the Aurora stage, piloted by a driver named Scott, upset about four miles out from Aurora. The passengers were more or less hurt. Mr. Hickman, a saloon keeper at Aurora, who sat on the box with the driver was thrown from his seat, pitched into a bank and had his face very badly cut and bruised. A stranger, Rodgers, who was inside of the coach had his shoulder dislocated. A woman of the town, resident at Aurora, was slightly hurt. Another outside passenger, a Spaniard, commonly known as Hoodlum Jack was very seriously injured, both internally and externally; he was flung from his seat and the coach fell across his body. The passengers ascribe the disaster to the intoxicated condition of the driver. One of the passengers states that the coach ran full twenty feet on two wheels before the driver was aware that anything was wrong. Scott's injuries could not be ascertained by our informant, as he (the driver) was, at last accounts, too drunk to know how he felt. The coach is a total wreck, and in the fall one of the horses had his neck broken; the other animals are uninjured.

PROBABLE SUICIDE.—A passenger on the southern coach last evening informs us, that the usually quiet town of Genoa was very much excited yesterday. The Justice of the Peace at that burgh told his wife in the morning, after breakfast, that he was disgusted with the way things were conducted on this mundane sphere and that he would cross the river Styx before night. He bid her an affectionate adieu and left the house. A number of the J. P.'s friends are searching for his body; but it is very likely that he will turn up all right. No one can account for this strange freak, as his domestic affairs are said to be of the happiest nature.

Mr. Kenyon of the Lyon County Times says that he will issue the first number of the Bodie Standard on or about the 10th of October. Also he will publish a paper at Aurora to be called the Esmeralda Herald. This will make its appearance about the 6th prox.

George W. Hawkins, the Mint man, who was injured by falling from a locomotive more than two months ago, is getting along very well, and will be in condition to resume his duties within the next two weeks.

THE NEW SEWER.—Chief Butts states that the new sewer on Telegraph street will be completed to-day, and that by 3 o'clock p. m. the water will be coursing through it. We are thankful.

Mr. E. B. Kilborn, of the V. & T. R. R. Company, informs us that the London Telegraph newspaper has a circulation of 250,000 copies per day. Whew!

Sleeping accommodations on the Virginia and Truckee Railroad are not of sufficient capacity now to satisfy all who want berths.

The Tom Thumb combination show will not take away any of Carson's ducats this time, because they will not show here.

Mr. A. M. McCabe, of the Mint guard, has recovered from his late illness, and is again on deck.

Mr. D. O. Mills left for San Francisco on Wednesday evening.
